but to assert her right to what is already hers and to exact reparation for the violation of her territory. The United States fully admit the right of a European power having a grievance against an American power to settle it, if necessary, by a resort to force of arms, always provided that the cession of no territory be exacted. The punishment of Venezuela would therefore not be objected to if the territorial question were not mixed up in the matter. But the Venezuelan claim that the "seizure" of British officers took place on Venezuelan territory and was therefore a lawful act, just as lawful as the seizure of Chinese officers violating British territory in Hongkong would be. If then, the United States stood by while reparation for the alleged outrage was exacted by England they would admit the territorial claim of the latter up to the point at which the seizure took place and that they are inclined to do. The attitude of the United States would not appear unreasonable if it applied to territory fairly in dispute—and Great Britain admits that there is certain territory as to the ownership of which there may be a question proper for arbitration—but the particular spot at which the seizure of British officers took place is claimed as indisputably British. As Mr. STEAD said recently, in an article in the Westminster Gazette:—"Considering the disreputable character of the Venezuelan Government, it seems extraordinary that any civilized power should contemplate such a crime as attacking a peaceful region under the rule or government of Spanish-American adventurers, whose only claim to the sympathy of the United States is that they call their anarchy a republic and fly a flag which does not fly outside the Western Hemisphere. We do not fear arbitration, but before it begins, reparation must be made for the high-handed violation of the territory governed by England." The affair, however, was admirably adapted for the manufacture of political capital in the United States. The Republican press was crying out about the alleged weakness of President CLEVELAND in tolerating England's claim, a cry calculated to materially affect the Presidential election next year. President CLEVELAND, in the interests of his party, if not of himself, has now gone one better than his opponents and proposes that the United States should play the combined role of policeman and judge and kick England out of whatever territory the American Commissioners may decide does not belong to her. The position is unpleasant, but it is incredible that the two great Anglo-Saxon nations should go to war about such a trifle. So far as England is concerned the territory in dispute is not worth fighting for and the upshot will probably be that for the sake of peace and quietness we will consent to submit to arbitration more than we think is fairly in dispute.

The Times of Ceylon says:—"Mr. Chamberlain refused to listen to the offer for a reduction of the military contribution to be paid. He was only moderately paid at 17 per cent. of the revenue—shows that the Treasury and the Colonial Office between them have made up their minds to screw all they can out of the Crown Colonies, and we think Ceylon is lucky that is, or the supposition that the 73 per cent. is all we are to be called on to pay—have got us into trouble."

he bullet wounds. I am of opinion that death must have been instantaneous. From the position and appearance of the body I should think the lady was lying asleep when she was shot. There was certainly nothing to suggest to me that she was a consenting party to the tragedy. The gunsmith had cut his own throat with a pistol. There was a deep wound on the left side of the neck, and it was evident that his death must have ensued very shortly after it was inflicted. There had been a great flow of blood, showing that after cutting his throat he must have moved about. Evidently he had wounded himself over the wash-hand basin, as it contained a quantity of blood, and also the razor which lay beside it.

LATE NEWS.—THE ANGLO-CHINESE.

Sydney, 19th November.
The question is now being actively canvassed as to whether Mrs. Dacre was a consenting party to her murder. Dr. Finschi gives the emphatic opinion that it was. It appears that Arthur Dacre was shot in the head mortally by two businessmen, Miss Mabel and Mr. George Matheson, and who came to Australia under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Dacre. Mr. Dacre, it is said, was deeply distressed. Dacre's wife, however, appears to have been eccentric of late.

London, 20th November.

The inquest on the bodies of Arthur and Amy James (otherwise Mr. and Mrs. Dacre) was held yesterday. Herbert Leighton said that on one occasion when they were going out for a walk with Dacre, Mrs. Dacre said to him, "For God's sake Leighton, don't leave him. I trust to you to bring him back." The jury after a short deliberation returned a verdict that Mrs. James died from wounds wilfully inflicted by her husband, who afterwards committed suicide. The remainder of the Dacres were interred at Waverley Cemetery in the afternoon. Nearly all the members of the medical profession of Sydney and thousands of the general public attended.

THE OPENING OF THE GERMAN BRIDGEPORT.

Berlin, 18th December.
The Reichstag was opened to-day. The Emperor William in his speech from the Throne said that the foreign relations of Germany continue to be friendly. Their efforts of Germany, Russia, and France to avert further complications arising from the war between Germany and Turkey were welcomed by the judicious moderation shown in Japan. The result, His Majesty said, would contribute to preserve and enlarge the field of peaceful labour for Germany's industry and trade. The situation arising from the diplomatic events in Turkey had occupied the serious attention of Germany, who, faithful to her alliances and principles of German policy, was ever ready to support the cause of justice and freedom, that is to work in the cause of peace. The united resolution of the Powers to respect treaties, and support the Sultan's Government in establishing an orderly state of things, justifies the hope that their efforts will not meet success.

The Information afforded in these Descriptions, consisting of over NINETY highly interesting articles, packed with facts, concise and exact, and containing statistics of the Trade of each Country and Port, would alone suffice to fill an ordinary volume.
